Abstract: In order to modernize the country, the People's Republic of China has always tried its best to communicate with the outside world, in virtue of the mass media and the interpersonal communications. This essay tries to argue that (1) China's international communications not only reflect the national dream of modernization since the year of 1840, but also root in the Chinese traditions of more than 5,000 years, and; (2) we must maintain a balance between modernization and Chinese tradition, and pay equal attention to the technique and the essence of China's international communications, so that we can construct and enhance China's soft power and international influence, and win the understanding and identity of the international society eventually.

Key Words: International Communications, Soft Power, Modernization, International Identity

Abstract: In the new century, some Chinese journalists raise their guards on the narrative nature of news and propose a new concept of moderate report. This new concept is of great significance in the modern history of Chinese press. It is not only a new paradigm of journalistic practice, but also a reflexivity of press-how to reflect society in a more and more complex environment.

——以大型音乐舞蹈史诗《东方红》的创作语境为例

Abstract: The historical background of seventeen-year pre-modern China is characteristic of four different topics, such as passion for the economic development, imagination of the political identity, revolution of the ideology system, and grandeur of the cultural ecology. To make it easier, the thesis goes to discuss them separately, though all of these four characteristics, interrelated with each other, belong to economic, political, ideological and cultural fields, respectively. Here, it must be pointed out that revolution, especially its spirit, runs through other three dimensions of passion, imagination, and grandeur. Further, passion sparks revolution, and grandeur determines its beauty, all based on imagination. Eventually, revolution gains endless vitality vise versa. As far as socialist art is concerned, these four factors exert a big influence on the writers, who create a deal of excellent socialist cultural products. Till now, it still highlights these four points as precious treasures when the ruling party establishes the long-term plan of promoting a prosperous socialist culture and developing a powerful socialist cultural society.

Key Words: New Culture, Historical Context, Passion, Imagination, Revolution, Grandeur

微博时代政府新闻发布的理论探索、 制度创新和角色重构

The Theoretical Exploration, Institutional Innovation and Role Re-modeling of China's "Spokesperson System" in the "Era of Micro-blogging"

Abstract: Chinese government institutions at both central and local levels have been implementing the "spokesperson system" and dramatically increasing their publicity with the domestic and international community since 2004. Based on the "propaganda" model and "publicity" model in the Western-imported "political communication" and the author's field survey of China's status quo, this study employs a comparative perspective to summarize and analyze the theoretical exploration and institutional innovation of the government/media relation and the role re-modeling of the government spokespersons in the socio-political context of contemporary China. The author also offers some policy recommendation on how to improve the efficiency and efficacy of the government publicity in China.

Key Words: propaganda, publicity, government spokesperson, press release

Abstract: Chinese Communist plenary session of the seventeenth Central Committee put forward to build the party press spokesperson system. This signifies our country is moving from public affairs opening to party affairs opening. Through tracing the main political parties in the news release history of the United States, Britain, Germany and other countries, the article analyzed the conceptualization and operation of new publicity. Against this background, this article examined different historical periods of the press release, undertook relatively comprehensive analysis, and provided comments and suggestions on how to draw lessons from the western political news publicity and promote the party press release system.

Key Words: Western partisan, press release, Chinese Communist Party, system construction

Abstract: Xinhua News Agency impressed the world by its launch of television broadcasting service (CNC) in 2010. Starting from the birth of CNC, this paper tries to decipher this new round of “going global” from the perspective of reform in the Chinese journalism system. This paper argues, in an era of globalization and marketization, the motive of seeking for political capitals and economic resources plays an important role of the goals of the “going global” projects by the Chinese news media, bringing in possibilities of domestic impact and future transformation. This paper hopes to witness the reforming process of the Chinese TV journalism, with increased experience and enhanced force from internal competition and external encounters.

This paper includes four parts. Introduction, the first part, raises the theme of the transformation of the Chinese journalism system inspired by the new-born CNC; the second part is on the background of going global projects of the Chinese television, focused on the domestic, instead of international, competition; thirdly, this paper tries to analyze the awkward situation of the CNC in the global market, owing to the Xinhua's status as one of the key mouthpieces of the state and the Party. At the end of the paper, possible reforming strategies are discussed. This paper hopes that to go global China needs orderly competition within the country and practical strategies across the world.

Key Words: CNC, “Going Global” of Chinese television, Chinese journalism system
